US-Soviet relations aired at forum

by Louis Schultz

"Soviet American relations are like a mugger holding a gun to the other's head," stated John Marks, director of Search for Common Ground. He added, "We have a stake in the other side not having a shaky hand on the trigger." Andrey Shoumikhin of the Soviet Academy of Sciences agreed with Marks, saying, "We should not try to stop the hand from shaking, but try to get rid of the pistol, and finally the mugger himself."

Nicolas Daniloff, the American newspaper reporter accused of spying by the Soviet Union, was also amongst several influential speakers addressing the recent "Big Thaw: Common Security and Common Sense" forum here at GSU. Soviet American relations was the theme for the day long event, which focused on Glastnost, and reforms in the USSR.

Marks noted that Shoumikhins' "Search for Common Ground" organization, recently agreed with the Institute for U.S. & Canadian Studies to promote conflict resolution. Marks and Shoumikhins maintained that because of this agreement, issues such as AIDS, hunger, disease, and space travel, can now be addressed.

Shoumikhin cautioned that reforms in the USSR are revisions in the system, more than they are steps toward democracy. Shoumikhin concurred with Lenins' philosophies, believing that more humanitarian reform, and more government involvement with international labor were necessary. He added, "Going back to Leninism doesn't mean re-establishing all principles at this time. That would be sheer dogmatism."

Shoumikhin said that Soviets have to analyse themselves, and get a perspective on their place in today's world.

Marks cautioned that the United States should keep up its defenses, but work toward further US-USSR discussions.

A host of other political dignitaries were joined with professors from several universities, along with a representative of the McDonald's corporation.

GSU students, and the public were invited to the forum, which was co-sponsored by the Chicago Sun-Times, South Suburban SANE-FREEZE, and the GSU Office of Conferences & Workshops.

FRANKIE AVALON ENTERTAINS AT BENEFIT.

250 at benefit for GSU center

by Karen Ziech

GSU's Regional Performing Arts Center is $198,000 closer to its $2.2 million goal following the recent "Sell Out the House" benefit which featured crooner Frankie Avalon and comedian Tom Dreesen.

Avalon, best known as a "teen-age idol" of the late '50s and early '60s, entertained benefit guests with impersonations, trumpet playing and dancing, while Dreesen, who grew up in Harvey, IL, poked good-humored fun at social, political and ethnic issues.

If all goes as planned, the campaign for funds to build the 900-seat theater—complete with orchestra pit, dressing rooms, loges, and special seating for the handicapped—should meet its goal by June 30, 1989, according to Bill Dodd, chief executive officer of the Governors State University Foundation. Work on the facility, which is being billed by some area leaders as the "Pride of the Region," could begin in the fall of 1990, and will entail rehabilitation and expanding the existing on-campus University Theater, he said.

The center, a project sponsored by the Foundation and supplemented with funds from the state of Illinois, will serve three major purposes for the university. Besides providing a professional facility for dramatic and musical productions, the center will enhance and expand the national and international video conferences as well as the continuing education programs GSU now offers.

With its 900-seat theater, the center will also benefit the south suburban area by providing a first class showplace that can host name performers and groups.

Two hundred and fifty guests attended the May 5th benefit to help the Foundation meet its $2.2 million commitment to the project. Donors who pledged $1,000 each enjoyed a gala dinner and entertainment by Avalon and Dreesen. In addition, donors will be recognized with a silver nameplate on one of the theater seats.

The total cost of the center will be approximately $5.4 million. The state of Illinois, acting on legislation proposed by Senator Aldo De Angelis, has set aside $2.2 million as a challenge/matching grant to the GSU Foundation. Another $1.3 million has already been donated by philanthropists and area businesses.

Reason for color of lot lights told

by Deanna Sweigart

Have you ever wondered why the parking lot lights are yellow?

Mike Foley, Director of the Physical Plant, explained that they are cheaper to run than white ones. When the university replaced the white lights with yellow ones in 1975, the cost of running the roadway lights dropped from $120 to $15.

During the 1975-76 energy crisis, the school put in the yellow lights in order to save energy and money.

The parking lot may now seem a little dark as well, since a cable is broken in parking lot A. The maintenance crew could not dig up the cable in the winter, when the ground was frozen. Now that the weather is getting warmer and the ground is thawing, the crew will start work on the cable.

Officer Harrison, of the University Police force, says enough police patrol the parking lots. One car patrols the parking lots to keep an eye on things, while one officer remains inside the building. Security says that the school is not in a high crime area.

Newly elected student senators attend first meeting of trimester

by Karen Ziech

At the first Student Senate meeting of the trimester one newly elected member questioned the purpose of the group and a returning senator tried to resolve the issue of removing from office those members who fail to attend.

While Senate President Eric Harwell did not present senators with minutes from the last meeting or an agenda for the current meeting and omitted items such as Officers Reports and Old Business, no one challenged his lack of attention to standard procedures. Harwell did entertain motions as New Business and some action was taken.

On motions by returning senator Susan Marshall and newly elected Charles Brown, three members who had resigned or graduated were dropped and their seats declared vacant. Senators then voted to fill these vacancies; Robyn Barclay was seated as representative from the College of Health Professions, while Virginia Faber and Christine Perrotta were placed in Student-at-Large seats.

Two seats are still held by senators who regularly fail to attend meetings, one by a man few of the others have ever seen.

Following the induction of new senators, Brown asked Harwell, "What is the purpose of the Student Senate at GSU?" Hearing Marshall chuckle, Harwell asked, "Would you like to answer that, Susan?" Marshall responded, "I have been asking that question for the last six months."

After no other senators would address the question, Harwell gave a lengthy explanation. Essentially, he said, "the Senate is an avenue to upper management," and acts on issues of concern to students.

When Marshall commented that, according to the Student Senate by-laws the body exists to "advise (the university) on educational policy," Harwell suggested that the Senate form an ad hoc committee to reconcile purpose with practice. However, he did not request a motion to this effect and no action was taken.

Newly elected senator Raleigh Shields voiced concerns about limited benefits for students who are veterans. Harwell said these are the kinds of issues senators should address and asked all members to bring a list of five such items for discussion to the next meeting.

However, it is discussions such as these that some senators see as counter-productive. Said Faber, who served on the Senate last year, the senate made lists of actions to accomplish last trimester and was then asked by Harwell to have forms for constituent concerns filled out, and still nothing was done. Echoing this complaint, Marshall says, "There are pages of resolutions" with suggested actions from last trimester.

New senator Michaelle Wisniewski says she, too, wondered what the concerns were from the preceding semester, but thought it was a good idea to know what her constituents wanted accomplished.

Wisniewski says she had mixed emotions about the meeting. Because she had a commitment immediately following the meeting, she was, she says, "concerned about waiting 35 minutes for (it) to begin." On the other hand, she was encouraged to hear Harwell promise that the next meeting would begin at exactly 3:00 p.m.

"I think if we'd had more time we could have accomplished more," Wisniewski said, "but I was happy with what did get resolved." Though only one meeting a month is routinely held during the Spring/Summer trimester, the senators agreed to meet again on May 24. "I was happy we were able to do that (schedule a second May meeting)," she said: "I got the feeling everyone wanted to start getting things done."

At the close of the meeting new senator Dawn Hahn commented on the importance of respecting the time commitments of senators, and asked why the meeting had begun so late. Harwell explained that he had been in a meeting trying clear up confusion over the seats of Faber and Perrotta.

New senators were then given a tour of the Student Life area where the Student Senate meets, keeps an office, and has its mail-boxes.

Service jobs send adults back to school

by Michaelle Wisniewski

The hottest national trend in college today is the number of adults over 25 who are returning to school to pursue college degrees to improve their standards of living.

The trend is evident here at GSU, where the average age of students is 35 and most are enrolled part time.

The trend is partially a reflection of America's changing economy. Since the mid-1970s, the country has been shifting from a manufacturing based economy to a service based economy.

In fact, the 1990s is already being called "the service decade." According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, nine out of ten new jobs created between 1987 and 1995 will be in the service industry.

Many adults are therefore attending college to gain the training necessary to work in such an economy. Without this training some adults may find themselves out of a job, or left in a dead-end job.

Both men and women are also finding themselves unfulfilled in their jobs and are attending college to gain the B.A. or M.A.

needed to make a career change.

For many women, attending college is the first step in reentering the job market. For some, divorce necessitates returning to college to obtain marketable career skills in order to support their family. Growing children and the need for a two income household often act as a catalyst for many women to return to college.

Many poor women attend college as a permanent way of getting off welfare. Federal financial aid and other special programs for the poor, help these women obtain college degrees.

Whatever the reasons for returning to school, the decision is often more difficult for women, especially married women, than it is for men. As the primary caregivers, women often have problems justifying to their families the fact that they'll have less time to devote to domestic responsibilities.

The burden of returning to school is usually heavier for mothers, who must be prepared to deal with family emergencies, from sick husbands and children, to elderly parents.

Despite this burden, most women say the experience of returning to college is worthwhile. As a 30-year-old woman I have enjoyed college much more now than I did at 18, when my life was much simpler.

Unfortunately, no magic formula can make returning to school as an adult easy. I have compiled some tips from my conversations with older students, married and single, that may make returning to school easier for adults.

* Discuss your decision with your family early in the decision-making process. If they are involved in the decision, gaining their support should be much easier.

* If working, also speak with your employer early. This will help you to determine if the employer will be supportive and flexible. You must determine early if you can rotate your work hours to attend classes or if you will have to coordinate your classes around your work schedule.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, nine out of ten new jobs created between 1987 and 1995 will be in the service industry.

* Visit admissions counselors at the colleges you are interested in attending and determine whether or not they have any programs designed specifically for adults. For example, GSU's Board of Governors degree program grants credit for life experience.

* Apply early for financial aid and determine if your employer has a college tuition reimbursement program.

* Students with children should make necessary arrangements for child care early. Some colleges, like GSU, have child care centers on campus. GSU's child care center is open Monday through Wednesday 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m., Thursday 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m., and Friday 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The cost ranges from $6.25 to $44 per week, depending on the amount of time a child spends at the center. Children must be toilet trained and at least 2-years-old.

Most importantly, develop a support group with other adult students. This, along with the support of family members, can make the process of returning to school seem much easier.

When you party, remember to...

It's as easy as counting from 1 to 10.

Guests:

1. Know your limit — stay within it.
2. Know what you're drinking.
3. Designate a non-drinking driver.
4. Don't let a friend drive drunk.
5. Call a cab if you're not sober — or not sure.

Hosts:

6. Serve plenty of food.
7. Be responsible for friends' safety.
8. Stop serving alcohol as the party winds down.
9. Help a problem drinker by offering your support.
10. Set a good example.

Logic Puzzle No. 200 Short Stories

The Puzzle:

Miss Timm gave an assignment to Ava and four other children of her third grade class. Over the holiday week-end they were to write a short story. Each story would have to be about both a bird and a flower. To add variety to their stories, Miss Timm assigned different birds and flowers to each student. (One student wrote about a rose.) From this information and the clues below, you should be able to determine what bird and flower each child wrote about.

The Clues:

1. The five children are: The one who wrote about the violet; the one who wrote about the pansy; the one who wrote about the robin; Bill and Jim.
2. The three boys are; the one who wrote about the hollyhock; the one who wrote about the sparrow, and Brian.
3. Neither Brian nor Bill had a cardinal in their story.
4. The children who wrote about the robin and the bluebird are of the same sex.
5. Eva did not write about the pansy, which was not in the same story as the dove.
6. The child who wrote about the daisy is of the opposite sex as that of the one who wrote about the sparrow.

Instructions:

Use the chart below to help you solve this puzzle. Ponder the clues; then enter an "O" in the appropriate boxes to indicate possibilities that you determine to be facts, and an "X" in boxes for possibilities that have been eliminated. Keep in mind that once you determine that a possibility is a fact, all other possibilities in that row and column can be eliminated.

The Public Forum

I was truly fortunate to attend the recent conference on U.S./Soviet relations offered through the Office of Workshops and Conferences. Attending this conference has made me realize the importance, not only of understanding one's own country and its historical development and progress but also that of other countries.

The sincerity, depth of knowledge and understanding displayed by guest Soviet panelist Dr. Audrey Shoumikhin in regards to world history, international relations and human nature was awe-inspiring and captivated my attention. He made me realize how the Soviet Union and the U.S. might differ in their views concerning national security in large part due to the fact that the U.S. has never experienced the invasion of its borders by an enemy which resulted in war being fought on American soil. In contrast, there is a whole generation of men and women in the U.S.S.R. who either fought or were victims of war which occurred on Russian soil during World War II. In describing the new reforms the Soviet Union is now undertaking, Mr. Shoumikhin informed the audience that it is an attempt to return to the "true" forms of Marxist/Leninism and away from the distorted versions of Marxist/Leninism of Stalin and subsequent leaders.

What I saw in Soviet citizen Shoumikhin was not the typical "Ivan Drago" type character as depicted by such movies as "Rocky IV" and "Rambo III" which portray the Soviets as a nation of ruthless communists bent on "taking over the world." Dr. Shoumikhin certainly was not such a personality. He neither proposed his country's socialist ideology as the solution to the world's problems, nor did he speak a word against U.S. capitalist ideology or any other ideology. He did however display a respect and understanding that each country has its own particular form of government and that to expect sweeping changes in ideology, international relations and nuclear arms reduction, would not be realistic. It was a relief however, to witness a real Soviet citizen at least express the same desire for global peace, common security and nuclear arms reduction that we in the U.S. have.

At one point during the panel discussions, Dr. Shoumikhin asked someone in the audience, "How do the American people view the people of the Soviet Union?" The answer from the audience was, I'm sad to say, quite true to the depictions the entertainment industry would have us believe about the people of the U.S.S.R., that "they want to blow us up!" Dr. Shoumikhin was genuinely surprised by this answer. The power of the entertainment industry to influence the attitudes, perceptions and values of the average American citizen is however, a force that perhaps our distinguished Soviet guest has not considered.

GSU's Donaldson Receives Award

Dr. Robert B. Donaldson II, a professor of public administration at Governors State University has been selected as the education winner for the 1989 Young Executive in Politics Achievement Award.

He received the award at the Seventh Annual Awards Banquet on May 6. The event was held at the Grand Ballroom of the Holiday Inn-Mart Plaza in Chicago.

Donaldson was recognized for "impressive professional accomplishments" and "commitment to the advancement of our community." The award is presented annually to persons who have made significant contributions to the community and have served as models for young people.

The Young Executives in Politics, founded by State Comptroller Roland W. Burris, selects each year's winners and presents the award.

Dr. Donaldson received the bachelor of science degree in business education from Florida A. & M. University and then gained teaching certificates from the National College of Education. He later received the master of philosophy in public administration and the master of public administration degrees from Roosevelt University.

He holds the doctor of education degree from Western Michigan University.

Dr. Donaldson has held a number of elected and appointed positions in municipal and local government, and recently was elected as trustee of the Village of Hazel Crest.

In 1983 and 1984, he was responsible for two major educational conferences relating to elected and appointed public officials. The First Annual Political Conference for Black Elected Officials drew more than 300 attendees, and the First Annual Educational Conference for Women in Politics attracted more than 160 participants.

The Lake County Parks Department is running a photography contest for amateur photographers throughout spring, summer and fall seasons. The deadline for entries is October 6, 1989, at 4:00 p.m., so you still have time to get that perfect shot of family and fun in the parks to submit your entries.

The winning photographs will be put on display at Gibson Woods Nature Preserve and at Deep River County Park at the conclusion of the contest.

Entries may be in Black and White or Color prints, must be 8 x 10 inches, and mounted on an 11 x 14 inch matte. Name, address, telephone number, category and the park site where the photo was taken must be given on the back of each entry, or the entry will be disqualified.

The Categories Are:

1. Activities/Special Events
2. Scenery/Landscapes
3. Flora
4. Fauna

5. The Seasons

Entries must be postmarked by October 6, 1989, at 4:00 p.m. or dropped off at these convenient locations.

Seminar advocates lifestyle changes

Two professors from the College of Health Professions encouraged Americans to improve their health by changing their lifestyle, at a recent seminar.

Beth Brutvan and Cheryl Mejta maintained that heart disease and cancer, the leading causes of death among Americans, are directly related to lifestyle.

The professors also maintained that family medical history, and psychological inventories such as personality traits are also involved in health appraisal.

Specific lifestyle risk factors are smoking, air pollution, diet excess, diet deficit, hazardous worksite, drug and alcohol abuse, and hypertension.

Individuals attending the seminar completed a self-scored "wellness assessment" questionnaire distributed by The National Wellness Institute Inc. According to the questionnaire, dimensions of wellness include emotional, physical, occupational, intellectual, spiritual, and social issues.

Brutvan and Mejta suggested that individuals make a health behavior change action plan by determining a wellness identifying health behavior outcomes.

Then, once specific methods and actions to achieve that outcome have been identified, the individual should actually work toward positive goals.

Career Designs

by Dan Amari

If you've just recently completed your Bachelor's degree, or if you're now seeing the end of the tunnel in a semester of two, you're probably thinking, planning and carrying out a good number of plans for your future success. Those things might include a good professional level job, increased earning potential, resulting in greater financial security, perhaps plans for a new home, and other new things for yourself and your family. Another item on your list of possibilities for the future should be plans for graduate study.

Why? There are a number of excellent reasons. Perhaps one of the most important, if you are very career oriented, and derive a great deal of your personal satisfaction, and indeed, your identity, from your work, you will find that possessing an advanced degree will do wonders for your career. Most people with an undergraduate degree, within a few years of successful work beyond the completion of the degree, find that they are at or very near brushing up against the limits of their potential to move up in their chosen career field, and without an advanced degree, will get 'passed over' regularly for promotions or other interesting opportunities for career advancement, for those who do have a graduate degree.

For those who regard financial gain as a primary motivating factor, consider these figures: The average salary offer to people finishing an MBA program exceeded the average salary offer to undergraduate business majors by over $15,000 per year in 1988. For the humanities and social science majors, the average salary offer for persons with Masters degrees was $5,000-$6,000 greater than the salary offers for those individuals with an undergraduate degree. And for majors in the sciences, the differential was between $4,000

Employee of the Month

NASIM ALI

Congratulations to Nasim Ali, secretary in the registrar's office who was chosen as the May C.S. Employee of the Month.

Nasim was nominated by Franchon Lindsay who said, "Nasim's positive attitude, friendly disposition and eagerness to assist students, C.S. employees and faculty enhances the registrar's office staff. Students who meet and talk with Nasim, even if at first irate, leave with a smile and a sense of being understood and listened to. She is warm and appreciative and when you commend her on a job well done, she thanks you profusely and immediately takes on additional duties and responsibilities. She will send notes of thank you to all whom she feels have assisted her. Nasim is what is known as 'people person.' We need more like her at GSU—they draw people to them."

Important student legal issues described

IS A MASTER'S DEGREE MARITAL PROPERTY? Yes, says a New York court of appeals. It recently ruled in favor of treating a master's degree in remedial reading as property in a divorce settlement. The degree, says the court, increased Kathleen McGowan's earning potential, and should be divided up with her husband—who says he helped pay her tuition. Kathleen McGowan's attorney warned that the finding "puts a damper on someone who has initiative—since the other spouse might want a piece of the action."

PAYING BACK SCHOOL LOANS is more difficult for women because of their lower salaries, according to a report by the American Council on Education. The results of the 1983-84 survey of graduates found that women earned an average of $16,300, while men earned an average of $20,000. About one in seven women faced loan payments of at least 10% of her pre-tax earnings.

Santa, there is a Virginia

by Jean Juarez

Ah yes, even Santa Claus has helpers named Virginia. One such helper is a caring lady named Virginia Cunningham who is a cashier in the cafeteria.

Anyone who dines in the ACE operated cafeteria knows about the little plastic cup by Virginia's register. That little cup catches spare change and goes to help the neediest children of Chicagoland have a nice Christmas.

Virginia got the idea two years ago after hearing Norman Ross, who for many years was chairman of this group, read a letter on the radio. Ross told of a cashier in one of the western suburbs who collected quite a tidy sum of money for needy children for Christmas by having such a cup next to her register. She tactfully encouraged her patrons to donate their spare change to the Children's Christmas Fund.

So Virginia decided to try it out too and see what she could do for the children to help make their Christmas happy. The first year she collected $269.93 for the children. The next Christmas she collected $850.00. Each year it is increasing. Last year she collected $1150.00.

She gives credit to Joyce Morishite of the Art department for spurring her on to reach the goals that have been set. When the GSU buildings were being bricked last year one of the workman donated a coffee can of pennies to the fund.

It takes special people like Virginia and Joyce to care about the needy children at Christmas time so get your spare change in that little cup and help to make Christmas 1989 even better than ever.

To date Virginia has already collected $450.00 on her way to this year's goal of $1300.00.

Civil Service scholarship is awarded

UNIVERSITY PARK — Governors State University student Mary Zalewski has received the 1989 Civil Service Senate Scholarship.

Mary, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Zalewski of Park Forest, was unanimously selected for the award. She is completing an undergraduate degree in business administration after transferring from Prairie State College.

Mary has been working two jobs to pay for her education. This scholarship, funded by GSU civil service employee contributions and fundraising, will help cover Mary's tuition expenses.

Mary is serving as secretary of the Student Program Action Council, she serves on the election committee and on the Campus Center Advisory Board.

A graduate of Rich East High School, Mary was eligible for this scholarship because her mother, Ellen, is a civil service staff member at GSU.

FBI is banned

The deans of Ohio State U. and the U. of Michigan law schools have banned FBI recruiters because of a federal judge's rule that the agency discriminated against Hispanics. The FBI, meanwhile, has denounced the ban and vehemently denied the charges. The successful discrimination lawsuit was filed in Texas on behalf of 311 agents, and the court will soon determine how much the FBI must pay agents to compensate for denial of promotions and assignments.

Logic Summary - Puzzle 200 SHORT STORIES

From clues 2 and 6, we determine that a girl must have written about the daisy. From clue 1, we determine that it was in the same story as the robin. Clue 4 tells us that the other girl wrote about the bluebird. Jim wrote about the cardinal (clue 3) and the hollyhock (clue 2). Bill was assigned the sparrow (clue 2) and Brian the dove. Brian did not write about the pansy (clue 5) but about the violet (clue 1). Neither Bill (clue 1) nor Eva (clue 5) wrote about the pansy; Ava did and it was in the same story as the bluebird. Eva is the girl who wrote about the robin and therefore, Bill's story was about the sparrow and the rose.

In summary:

Ava - Bluebird - Pansy
Bill - Sparrow - Rose
Brian - Dove - Violet
Jim - Cardinal - Hollyhock
Eva - Robin - Daisy

The Big Thaw

Common Security and Common Sense

JAMES CRACRAFT

NICHOLAS DANILOFF WITH PRISCILLA ROCKWELL AND PROFESSOR ROBERT PRESS

THE BIG THAW focused on the ways Soviet-American relationships are changing in light of reduced world tensions. Authorities and activists from various perspectives addressed the profound economic, political, and social shifts within the Soviet Union and discussed their effects on the American and international scenes. Nicholas Daniloff, US News and World Report correspondent arrested in Moscow on espionage charges, Andrey Shoumikhin of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Dr. Bernice Bild, chair of the Chicago Peace Conversion Commission, and GSU's Dr. Robert Press and Dr. Anthony Wei were among the presenters. ## Like A Butterfly From Flower To Flower

Like a butterfly that moves
from flower to flower,
so you have been with me,
and now that the nectar of my love no longer fills you, and the fragrance of my beauty no longer inspires you...you are gone.
Off again on your hurried flight, like a butterfly
from flower to flower.
Passing by the value and beauty of the woman who is near, you seek after your imagined goddess in other virgin soil. And when yet another enchanting flower has lost its savor, and the image of your goddess is stolen by the wind, then off you go again
in search of "true love," like a butterfly...
from flower to flower.

Boss Lady

Mahogany desk
Flaming hair Tiny person in despair.

Ledges balance.
Millions rest.
People's jobs at her behest.

Put back the mask
Pay the toll Smile brightly take control.

by Jeanne Meeks

Dusty Roads

Her morning-fresh muslin
now damp muddled by the dust swirling to it Sweat streams over her rippled ribs and seeps to the waistband of her peacock skirt.

A riot of crows leaf a barren tree waiting to be about their carnivorous purpose.
Farmers to market intent on their task plod past just another woman.

With the morning's road obscured
by dust,
she rests on her bundled belongings pitifully few but easy to carry and only truly hers.
Alone, but no longer empty, she lifts her heavy hair from her neck
and gathers it in tortoise-shell combs.

The mirage rising from the heated road invites, gives a reason to go on.

Thankful for the rest,
she swings her bundle high on her shoulder and kicks the dust from her shoeless feet.

Passenger

Powerless but to watch, Lathered horses out of control whipped to a frenzy
by some unknown task master.
Ambition eats at your soul
like carnivores on bone, frays the homespun fabric, shrivels berries on the vine
—their nectar sucked dry.
A swarm of grasshoppers drop tobacco stains on white linen left for the summer sun while children play
in industrial pollution.
